

Glengarry Place for the Arts

PRESS RELEASE

28 September 2007

Maxville, September 28th: On Monday, October 1st, the Glengarry Place for the Arts will be making the formal announcement of its partnership with the Hôpital Glengarry Memorial Hospital Foundation in its first Medieval Feast. Directors of the GPA and Foundation Director Roxanne Robertson will be launching the final sales phase of this project.

The event will be an opportunity for staff to learn more about the event and see sample costumes. The event program and sponsors will also be announced at that time.

The deadline for tickets will be Sunday, October 14th, and, on Saturday, October 20th at 5:30pm, the “drawbridge” will rise at the Metcalfe Centre in Maxville on the festivities, with merchants and entertainers dressed in authentic costume. Guests will be encouraged to wear period dress, also. Admission will be by ticket only, at a cost of $50 per person.

The assembled throng will be seated at 6:30pm and the fayre will be served in four “removes” (courses). Before courses, minstrels, sword-fighters, singers, dancers and presentations will amuse the revellers.

More details will follow.
